AT WACO.

Special.

WACO, TEX., May 30 -The week ends with a much improved state of affairs here. The river is now within its banks, and most of the inundated territory is clear of water. The people who were driven from their homes are returning, and the business houses will be reoccupied by Monday.

The railroad companies have large forces at work repairing the damages. The Missouri Pacific road is running all trains with regularity, and the Central and the Texas & St Louis roads will run Monday. People are beginning to feel cheerful again, and hopes are entertained that the weather now will be dry and niessant.

For two hours the north wind brought the most sullen, determined and terrific rain that we have ever witnessed.

The Santa Fe train, due here at 8 p. m., was met by the storm soon after leaving Temple and was nearly an hour late in reaching here. After waiting at the depot for some minutes, it started down the incline into the main Bosque valley. The Santa Fe railroad entering the valley here runs north through it for twenty miles, leaving it at Meridian. As if in dread of the twenty miles of gloom and uncertainty, the train left the depot on slow time. After proceeding about slow time.
